Paris is prepared to resist a long siege. Its fortifications consist of three distinct circles sweeping around the city—first, the solid wall of masonry eighteen feet high extending for twenty-two miles around the old sections of Paris; second, the system of seventeen detached forts arranged at intervals, two miles beyond the wall, and making a circuit of the city thirty-four miles long; and third, an outer girdle of forts, seventy-five miles in circumference, and the Seine.

Americans Fond of Cocoa.

The United States consumes more than 26 per cent of the total production of cocoa, or over 60 tons per annum. Germany consumes almost 50 tons, and France 28,044 tons each year. Great Britain uses over 25 tons, so it may be seen that this is an enormous industry, and one of the most valuable products grown.

CHAMBERLAIN WINS IN SHERIFF'S RACE

BELOIT PATROLMAN LEADS RANSOM BY 665—DUNWIDDIE BEATS CHRISTYSEN.

CLOSE ASSEMBLY VOTE

Winegar Defeats Rosa By Less Than a Hundred Votes in Second District—Easy Victory for Whittier.

A. Odell Chamberlain of Beloit, a patrolman on the Beloit city police force, was nominated as the republican candidate for sheriff at the primary election on Tuesday. Chamberlain's victory was decisive, his nearest competitor for the nomination being E. H. Ransom of Janesville, who secured a total of 374 votes against Chamberlain's 539, according to complete unofficial returns received at the county office. Schell's total vote of 266.

374 was something of a surprise to his friends, who expected that he would at least be second on the ticket. Alvin Maxfield received a total of 248 votes in the county.

The only other contest for nominations on the county ticket was for the office of district attorney, for which Stanley C. Dunwiddie of Janesville was renominated by a margin of some 300 votes over Chester H. Christensen of Beloit.

The republican nominees for assembly in Rock county are Lawrence E. Whittier in the first northern district and Albert J. Winegar in the second district.

The defeat of Assemblyman C. D. Rosa for renomination in the second district was one of the big surprises of the day and indicates how decisive the Philipps sentiment predominates in the county even in the sections formerly considered progressive territory.

Winegar polled a total of 1,103 against Rosa's 1,007, according to the complete unofficial returns. Winegar not only ran strong in the city of Beloit, carrying five out of the seven precincts, but he also won a majority of the country precincts.

In the first district Mr. Whittier had an easy time of it, with Barless second and Kennedy a poor third. Whittier received a handsome endorsement in his own city, getting 120 to Barless' 15 and Kennedy's 7. Whittier carried the Third and Fifth wards of Janesville, but Barless ran slightly ahead of him in the First and Fourth and tied him in the Second.

The accompanying tables give the returns as received for the various county offices on the republican ticket which were contested. The second choice vote was light throughout the county and will not figure in the final result.

SHEAFOR TO RETURN TOMORROW FOR WORK

New Head of High School Will Establish Hours for Conference With Parents and Pupils Regarding Work.

J. T. Sheafor, principal of the Janesville high school, will arrive in the city tomorrow to complete arrangements necessary for the opening of the fall term of educational activities on Tuesday. Sheafor will establish hours at the county office for the conference with parents or students who desire to arrange courses or talk over work for the year. The hours arranged will be from 9 to 12 each morning, 2 to 4 in the afternoon and in the evening from 7:30 to 8:30.

Coincident with the opening of the graded and high school the industrial day school will also resume operations as formerly.

Work here is for sixth, seventh and eighth grade pupils and also for permit students. Notice of meeting of the high school classes will be published later.

At the high school this morning about twenty-five students were given examinations in one hour of ending in which they failed at the close of school last spring. Passing in the tests will permit the writer advancing a grade.

COUNTY FOR PHILIPP BY HANDSOME MARGIN

POLLS A TOTAL OF 1,538 WHILE DAHL TAKES SECOND PLACE WITH 895.

BANCROFT RUNS AHEAD

Receives 1,009 While Morris Runs Close With 922—McGovern Receives 688 According to Unofficial Figures.

Emmanuel L. Philipp of Milwaukee, who was nominated as the republican candidate for governor at the primary election Tuesday, received a handsome endorsement in Rock county, running ahead of Amos H. Dahl of Westby, his nearest opponent in this county by 650 votes. According to complete unofficial returns the total republican vote for governorship stood as follows: Philipp, 1,538; Dahl, 885; Hays, 417; Roethke, 303; Hull, 168; and Utman 85.

Levi H. Bancroft of Richland Center, republican candidate for the United States senate, and Philipp's running mate on the Madison convention ticket, also carried the county but ran behind Mr. Philipp by more than 500 votes. Bancroft received a total of 1,007 votes in the county against 417 for Hays, 256 for Strang, 222 for Estabrook, and 73 for Burke.

It is a notable fact that Mr. Philipp carried every precinct in the county except Janesville, Orfordville, Spring Valley and three Beloit precincts going for Dahl by slight margins. Every ward in the city of Janesville went strongly for Philipp, the largest vote of any precinct in the county being cast for him in the third with 182 votes. Hattson's strength failed to develop while Roethke's poll was somewhat of a surprise on account of its size.

Morris cut in on Bancroft for the U. S. Senator nomination in every precinct so that Bancroft ran far behind Philipp. Bancroft carried every ward in Janesville, however, and a good showing in the country precincts. He fell down in Beloit where McGovern and Morris showed unusual strength. McGovern ran ahead of Morris in Janesville, while the accompanying tables give the result in tabulated form.

How England Prepares for War. All Classes Ready to Play a Part in the Great Struggle

Frederick Moore, who lives at Burton on the Trent, one of the great English mobilization camps, writes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. M. Moore, of 321 Racine street, further details of the actual happenings in his particular district. It is a most interesting mis-sive and supplemented by a copy of the Burton newspaper which has not yet reached the effects of the censor's shears. He writes as follows:

Burton has sprung into considerable prominence as the result of the declaration of war. The borough presents the appearance of a garrisoned town, but the chief happenings which have brought these things about have occurred so suddenly that the people have scarcely realized the extent to which Burton has become a military center. We here summarize the various incidents as follows:

Burton constitutes the mobilizing center for the North Midland Division.

Active preparations carried out for the garrisoning of 10,000 troops, including four batteries of the Royal Field Artillery.

Town Hall to be used as headquarters for some 40 to 50 officers. Messrs. Peach and Co.'s maltings in Anglesey Road accommodate the Burton Battalion.

Four maltings at Shobnall, belonging to Messrs. Bass and Co., are the headquarters of the Royal Engineers, and the Christ Church schools in Uxbridge street, may be used for the purpose of billeting the incoming troops, 5,000 of which will be at Shobnall.

Burton squadron of the Staffordshire Imperial Yeomanry billeted at the various licensed houses in the town.

Two Red Cross hospitals, one of fifty beds, to be established at Burton town hall and the St. Paul's Institute.

Throughout last week officers were busy impressing horses, steam lorries, and motor vehicles from manufacturers and tradespeople, one firm alone being called upon to provide thirty horses and twenty vehicles, together with grain, etc.

We are in a position to give the exact number of the following:

Four Infantry Battalions.
Three batteries of the North Midland Royal Field Artillery.
The 5th Company of the Army Service Corps.

Two companies of the Royal Engineers.
The Staffordshire Volunteer Ambulance Brigade.
1,000 horses.

40 guns.
Supt. Moss, as billet master, has secured accommodations as follows:

Messrs. Bass and Co.'s maltings on the Shobnall road for the Artillery; the Army Service Corps and the 5th Battalion North Staffordshire regiment.

Messrs. Peach and Co.'s maltings, Anglesey road for the 5th North (Burton).
Messrs. Peach and Co.'s maltings, Anglesey road for the 5th North (Burton).

Christ Church Schools, Uxbridge street for the Voluntary Ambulance Brigade.

The Town Hall as the headquarters for all the officers—between 40 and 50.
The horses will be pegged out in the fields adjoining the maltings where huts, etc., are also being prepared.

Scenes at the Maltings.
The scenes both inside and outside Messrs. Peach's maltings in Anglesey road on Thursday night were of a striking character. A large crowd was gathered around the entrance, over which was placed a sign: "Away in the distance could be seen the glow of fires, the steady march of guards, and little groups of soldiers standing about. One could not help feeling deeply impressed by the spectacle."

By the courtesy of the officer in charge, a representative of the "Chronicle" was permitted to make a tour of inspection around the premises. It was nine o'clock and the count of the extensive preparations which had to be made, tea was not finished. Sergeant Johnson was in charge of the commissariat department, and he and his staff were being kept busy measuring out tea. Some of the men had brought sufficient rations for one meal with them, and others were supplied with bread, butter and jam. As one remarked, "We are not having camp fare, but we are well satisfied." Most knew that in another week they would probably be on short rations, but the prospect did not seem to affect them. The slightest huge stacks of bread and provisions attracted attention almost immediately. In one portion of the yard a guard was mounted over a large quantity of ammunition. It was difficult to see when looking at all these things, that one was still in peace-loving Burton.

Inside the maltings a number of the men, tired out and already prepared themselves for the night, while others were fast asleep. All but the Lichfield Company—who brought blankets with them—slept on the stone floor but this they did not seem to mind the slightest. On the top floor, two Burton Companies, A and B, and the Lichfield and Uttoxeter Company E, were quartered; on the second floor were the other Burton Companies, H, a portion of the Stafford Company and the Tamworth Company, C, while on the top floor were the remainder of the Stafford Company, with the Rugeley Company, D.

"Lights out" was at 10:30. Most of the men are stated to have slept well, and rose promptly when the "Reveille" was sounded at half-past five next morning. Bread, butter and tea was served for breakfast at eight o'clock. Dinner, consisting of stew, familiarly known among the men as "pintoon" was served at one o'clock.

Yeomanry Activity.
The Burton Squadron of Yeomanry are no wup to their full strength, and every man has volunteered for service abroad if need be, a most satisfactory state of affairs. The last of the horses required arrived on Sunday afternoon, the animals having been obtained from Chester, Leek, Cheltenham, Ashbourne, Rochester, Tisbury, Barton and Burton. Throughout Saturday the recruits were exercised in musketry drill, while on Sunday they had riding drill. The commanding officer, Colonel Bromley Davenport, D. S. O., and Captain and Adjutant Watson visited the town, inspecting the men's billets, the stables, horses, and stores and expressing themselves as very pleased with all they saw.

Military Siding at Derby Turn Completed.
The work of erecting a great railway siding at Derby Turn for the troops and horses that are to be quartered in Burton was completed during the night. The platform is two hundred feet long, and is lighted at intervals by eight gas lamps. While there are four newly made horse troughs connected by the main with hose. A second outlet on to Derby road has been constructed, and the stables have as foundations, under beds, so that the whole structure appears solid enough to carry even heavy artillery.

Army Officers at Burton Club.
We understand that the committee of the Burton club have extended their hospitality to the officers stationed in Burton in connection with the mobilization movement.

Health Insurance of Reserves and Territorials.
Contributions during embodied service will be at reduced army rate of 3d. a week, 14d. of which will be deducted from pay. This will be paid on special army (B) cards supplied by military authorities.

As regards ordinary cards for current half year Reserves should fill in the name of the society and branch (if any), and deposit cards at military depot in the box provided for the purpose. Territorials should send in their cards to their societies writing Anglesey road, New street, Lichfield. Cards left in custody of employers should be kept until further notice unless claimed by the man.

During embodied service any claim to maternity benefit should be made by the wife to the approved society, or, in the case of deposit contributors, to the Insurance Committee, in the ordinary way.

Burton Battalion's Route March a Picturesque Scene.
The Burton Territorial Battalion on Tuesday undertook a somewhat heavy task. The "camp" at Peach's maltings was struck, the kit bags all piled into the luggage wagons, and the battalion issued into Anglesey road. Every man carried his complete kit, rifle, and one hundred rounds of ammunition, amounting in all to a considerable weight.

The program was a route march, via Anglesey road, New street, High street, Burton bridge, and so to Walton where the men turned towards the railway station and so gaining the Lichfield road, marched back to Burton. Their appearance in High street attracted the notice of a great deal of attention, and it appeared to be imagined on all hands that they "had got their marching orders," and that Burton was seeing the last of her soldier sons at all events for some time.

The preparations for the march, which was intended to be a sort of dress rehearsal of the final departure of the troops from Burton, where so complete that the misapprehension in the minds of spectators can well be understood.

Burton hitherto has only been used to its three local companies, but here for the first time we have the full battalion of nearly a thousand men in our midst, with its complete complement of gun carriage, horses, and baggage wagons, ready for active service.

In these circumstances public attention was naturally heightened, and the picturesqueness of the scene was enhanced as the troops passed the Post Office. The guard which had been placed there turned out and presented arms, and each company of the whole battalion as it passed returned the salute. These things are very familiar to those who live in or visit Burton, but to the thousands of military stations, but they have been witnessed by Burtonians in their own town probably for the first time in their lives.

Mr. E. L. Oswell's Appointment.
Mr. E. L. Oswell, the lieutenant-colonel of the Burton Battalion, D. S. O., who formerly held a commission in the old Volunteer (2nd North Staffs) Battalion, has been appointed, with the rank of lieutenant, to command the depot at the Burton Territorial headquarters in Horninglow street. It is interesting to remember that he is a native of Burton, having been born at intervals by eight gas lamps. While there are four newly made horse troughs connected by the main with hose. A second outlet on to Derby road has been constructed, and the stables have as foundations, under beds, so that the whole structure appears solid enough to carry even heavy artillery.

Recruits Recruiting in Burton.
During the past week, on Monday alone twenty-two local men and youths enlisted, three being recruits. Of the dozen Burton recruits who went to Lichfield for medical examination, six returned, and stated that when they arrived at Lichfield the examining doctors having left the barracks they were told to wait in the recruits' dressing room until the morning. They, however, returned to Burton.

The Embodied Battalion.
All members of the Burton Battalion of Territorials and Burton Squadron of Yeomanry on Saturday received the bounty of £5 10s. to which they are entitled on embodiment under the rules governing the Territorial Force. The company were sent to the depot in the box provided for the purpose. Territorials should send in their cards to their societies writing Anglesey road, New street, Lichfield. Cards left in custody of employers should be kept until further notice unless claimed by the man.

The preparations for the march, which was intended to be a sort of dress rehearsal of the final departure of the troops from Burton, where so complete that the misapprehension in the minds of spectators can well be understood.

Burton hitherto has only been used to its three local companies, but here for the first time we have the full battalion of nearly a thousand men in our midst, with its complete complement of gun carriage, horses, and baggage wagons, ready for active service.

In these circumstances public attention was naturally heightened, and the picturesqueness of the scene was enhanced as the troops passed the Post Office. The guard which had been placed there turned out and presented arms, and each company of the whole battalion as it passed returned the salute. These things are very familiar to those who live in or visit Burton, but to the thousands of military stations, but they have been witnessed by Burtonians in their own town probably for the first time in their lives.

Mr. E. L. Oswell's Appointment.
Mr. E. L. Oswell, the lieutenant-colonel of the Burton Battalion, D. S. O., who formerly held a commission in the old Volunteer (2nd North Staffs) Battalion, has been appointed, with the rank of lieutenant, to command the depot at the Burton Territorial headquarters in Horninglow street. It is interesting to remember that he is a native of Burton, having been born at intervals by eight gas lamps. While there are four newly made horse troughs connected by the main with hose. A second outlet on to Derby road has been constructed, and the stables have as foundations, under beds, so that the whole structure appears solid enough to carry even heavy artillery.

Recruits Recruiting in Burton.
During the past week, on Monday alone twenty-two local men and youths enlisted, three being recruits. Of the dozen Burton recruits who went to Lichfield for medical examination, six returned, and stated that when they arrived at Lichfield the examining doctors having left the barracks they were told to wait in the recruits' dressing room until the morning. They, however, returned to Burton.

The Embodied Battalion.
All members of the Burton Battalion of Territorials and Burton Squadron of Yeomanry on Saturday received the bounty of £5 10s. to which they are entitled on embodiment under the rules governing the Territorial Force. The company were sent to the depot in the box provided for the purpose. Territorials should send in their cards to their societies writing Anglesey road, New street, Lichfield. Cards left in custody of employers should be kept until further notice unless claimed by the man.

During embodied service any claim to maternity benefit should be made by the wife to the approved society, or, in the case of deposit contributors, to the Insurance Committee, in the ordinary way.

Burton Battalion's Route March a Picturesque Scene.
The Burton Territorial Battalion on Tuesday undertook a somewhat heavy task. The "camp" at Peach's maltings was struck, the kit bags all piled into the luggage wagons, and the battalion issued into Anglesey road. Every man carried his complete kit, rifle, and one hundred rounds of ammunition, amounting in all to a considerable weight.

The program was a route march, via Anglesey road, New street, High street, Burton bridge, and so to Walton where the men turned towards the railway station and so gaining the Lichfield road, marched back to Burton. Their appearance in High street attracted the notice of a great deal of attention, and it appeared to be imagined on all hands that they "had got their marching orders," and that Burton was seeing the last of her soldier sons at all events for some time.

COURT ORDERS INFANT PLACED IN NURSE'S CARE.
After hearing testimony and recommendations from the attorneys, Judge H. L. Maxfield ordered that a two months old babe named Austin Walsh be placed in the hands of a trained nurse for a period of three weeks. Complaint was made to District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie by John Coyne that an infant girl born the first of July in Edgerton was not receiving sufficient care to preserve life in the hands of Mrs. Ogden, of Edgerton. The mother of the child died and the father, Patrick Walsh, placed the babe in the care of Mrs. Ogden.

The state's warrant alleges that the infant would die if not given more experienced care than that given it by Mrs. Ogden. After testimony was offered Judge Maxfield heard the testimony of Mrs. Ogden, who claimed possession of the Walsh baby. The attorneys agreed that three weeks was sufficient time to aid the baby's health in the care of a trained nurse, after which the child will be entrusted to Mrs. Ogden's care.

Kaiser "Hanged" in Burton.
The Emperor of Germany, in effigy, was hanged to a lamp post on Waterloo street by a large crowd of boys on Thursday night. The lads danced around the lamp heartily singing "We don't want to fight, but my lingo it we do," and in a very short time there was a large crowd of highly amused spectators.

Water Carnival Postponed.
A special meeting of the Water Carnival sub-committee of the Town's Attractions committee was held at the Queens' Hotel on Wednesday under the presidency of the Deputy-Mayor (Councillor T. Jenkins), others present including Mr. S. H. Evershed (chairman of the Finance Committee), Messrs. D. R. Ferguson, W. Beck, A. W. Waddell, S. N. Allaway, C. Severn, A. W. Rowley, and G. F. Metcalf (hon. sec.).

The meeting was called to consider the advisability or otherwise of postponing the carnival owing to the outbreak of hostilities, and the chairman apparently voiced the feelings of the committee when he proposed that the venture should be dropped for the present.

After some discussion Mr. Evershed proposed and it was carried, that subscribers to the carnival fund should have their donations returned to them with an expression of thanks for the support tendered, but so far as we can gather it was agreed that from what source the committee are to obtain the £3 or £10 already expended probably some of the subscribers will intimate to Mr. Evershed that there will be no need to trouble. The half-guineas may be utilized for this purpose. The out-of-pocket expenses of several orders having remained—quite providentially as it now appears—in abeyance for "bottles," fireworks and such like, which had they been placed would have meant a greatly increased outlay.

Prior to dispersing the meeting expressed its thanks to the respective chairmen (Councillor T. Jenkins and Mr. S. H. Evershed) and to the hon. secretary, Mr. G. F. Metcalf, to whom a special vote of praise was accorded for his enthusiastic and successful handling of the business of the committee.

CIVIL WAR HEROES PARADE IN DETROIT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 2.—Close to 15,000 veterans of the Civil War today marched through the streets of Detroit in annual parade. A few hundred others—disabled, or too feeble to stand the strain of the long walk—followed their comrades in automobiles. In all, nearly twenty thousand of the men who fought for their country in the sixties, were in line. Each old soldier, as he passed the flag-decked reviewing stand in Camp U.S. Martin, where stood Commanding Chief Washington Gardner, and a staff, gave salute to the reviewing officers.

The parade, as usual, was the crowning feature of the Grand Army National Encampment. Commanded John Sautter, Pennsylvania, of the Sons of Veterans, marched at the head of more than 1,000 members of the auxiliary organization, bringing up the rear of the big parade.

As the veterans marched through the streets, more than 3,000 school children dressed in white and each bearing a flag, sang patriotic airs.

Every effort was made by the city authorities to provide prompt attention for any of the marchers who might be overcome by the unusual exertion. For first aid, two large hospital tents were erected along the line of march and every established hospital in the city was prepared for any emergency. The care of the patients was given to the National Red Cross Society, and 50 nurses and a dozen orderlies were in attendance. In addition to the national encampments will continue through tomorrow and Friday, but most of the time will be given over to the business sessions.

KAREL WINS COUNTY; PAUL RE-NOMINATED

RECEIVES TOTAL OF 822 VOTES AGAINST AYLRARD'S 468.—VOTE IS VERY LIGHT.

RIORDAN BEATS BONER

Present Assemblyman in First District Gets Nomination Hands Down.—Aylward Candidate Wins in Sec. 2.

With a county democratic vote of less than 1,500 cast at the primary election on Tuesday, Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee was given a strong endorsement in Rock county for the democratic nomination for governor, the total vote with but a few outlying precincts missing, standing Karel, 822, and Aylward 468. Rock county also endorsed Thomas M. Kearney of Racine for the democratic nomination for United States senator with 570 votes against 376 for Paul O. Hustung of Mayville. With ten or more precincts missing, but with total returns from Beloit and Janesville, the vote in the county on the democratic candidates for congress for the first district stood, Calvin Street, 490; Paul O. Hustung, 352; Alexander M. Paul of Milton, re-nominated as the democratic candidate to the assembly for the first district, defeating his opponent, T. C. Richardson, by a vote of nearly 250 votes. The totals as shown in the accompanying table are: Paul 452; Richardson, 206.

The only victory for Aylward democratic Rock county was the nomination of John J. Riordan of Beloit, as assemblyman for the second district. He defeated D. T. Boner of Clinton by a hundred or more votes according to incomplete returns.

Karel and Kearney were given a heavy majority over Aylward and Hustung in Janesville, the ratio on total returns being three to one or better in Karel's favor. Aylward carried Beloit by about the same ratio, but the total democratic vote in the Line City was exceedingly light.

Board of Public Work Closes Contract For Bridge Construction Material.

Construction material for the re-decking of the Monterey bridge has been ordered by the Board of Public Works. The contract for the material will be started on the bridge in about three weeks time, on the arrival of the material ordered. Bids were received from many manufacturing companies and the best offers were accepted by the Board and the orders given recently.

As the Monterey bridge is in badly need of repair and the council have ordered a complete improvement, including frame work with new decking and plank paving. Three-inch plank will be laid over which two layers of felt will be used on the top of the yellow pine plank which will be treated with creosote.

The paving blocks to be used will be subjected to sixteen pounds pressure of creosote and will be thoroughly waterproofed. The cost of the material is estimated at three thousand dollars. The old timbers taken from the bridge will be used to make temporary repairs on the Jackson street bridge.

AERIAL EXPERIMENTS FROM PASSENGER CAR HERE ON THE ST. PAUL

Beloit College Professor Attempts to Eliminate Wireless Towers for Railroad Messages From Trains.

The first railroad train to run out of Janesville equipped with wireless left the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul station this morning shortly after 11 o'clock. It was the regular Delta Junction division train bound for Bay, Rockford and other Illinois points.

Prof. C. A. Culver, professor of physics at Beloit college, was in charge of the station, and under him the experiment of eliminating wireless towers for railroad messages from trains was being conducted.

On the Delaware and Lackawanna railroad in the east wireless to and from trains has proven successful, but it has been necessary to erect high towers to permit the transmission of messages from railway trains and stations.

The experiments of Prof. Culver are sanctioned by the St. Paul railroad, special permission for the use of the cars being given by the company. Prof. Culver is attempting to eliminate the high aerial towers necessary at present in the sending and receiving of messages from railway trains and stations.

At other nearby places during the summer the experiments have been attempted. Prof. Culver did not care to say as to the success of the trials. To protect his inventions and secure patents it is necessary to maintain some degree of secrecy.

No receiving apparatus was installed on the train this morning. One was installed at the depot at Beloit and from the car it was the plan of the operator to transmit messages to Beloit only. Prof. Culver fitted up his station in the last coach of the train.

HAD NO LIGHT IN SALOON; ARRESTED

Chief Champion to Prosecute Liquor Dealer for Alleged Violation of Ordinance.

Joseph Croak, who conducts a saloon at 15 South Main street, was arrested this morning by Chief of Police D. Champion for "neglecting and failing to have and keep lights burning in his bar room between the hours of sundown last evening and five o'clock this morning" as the government ordinance provides. It is alleged by Chief Champion that during the entire night there was no semblance of a light in the Croak saloon so as to allow the authorities to obtain a view of the bar room. Croak was arraigned before Judge Maxfield in the municipal court this afternoon to answer the charge.

At two o'clock this afternoon Croak appeared in the municipal court and through his attorney, E. H. Ryan, pleaded not guilty to the charge. The trial was set by Judge Maxfield for September 14th at ten o'clock. Croak was released in the custody of the arresting officer, Chief Champion.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE MOST DISCOURAGING WORK.
 ONE morning not long ago I threw down my pencil in despair. The thoughts which I was trying to catch and imprison on paper, refused to be coaxed out of their hiding places in the very back of my brain. The words, too, eluded me, and irrelevant thoughts that I did not want to entertain at just that time, came crowding in upon me. "There is nothing so discouraging in the world," I finally decided, "as trying to write when the thoughts and words elude you, and you can't keep your mind where it ought to be."
 Whereupon I threw down my pencil and wandered disconsolately out on the veranda and across the street to seek comfort from the Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat.
 The Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat greeted me cheerfully, as always, but with a preoccupied air. "I'm glad you came," my dear," she said, "for you may be glad to tell me what's wrong with this dress I'm trying to make over. I can't seem to make it hang right where it drapes. I do think there is no work in the world so discouraging as trying to make over things."
 Just then a telephone call demanded the lady's attention and she threw down the dress just as I had thrown down my pencil. While she was at the telephone Ellen, mistress of the kitchen regions, appeared with a worried look on her face, and not seeing her, I knew what the matter, but I don't believe the jelly is going to jell. I've put it back and boiled it over once and if I had to do it again I shall give up. Don't wish all I had to do was to sit at a desk in a cool room instead of fussing over a hot stove."
 The Lady came back from the telephone. "It was John," she explained, "to tell me he wouldn't be home to lunch. They're taking stock and he has to be there every minute. He doesn't think he'll even get home to dinner. Poor boy, he does hate that part of the business."

Before I took my leave I asked if the Lady had seen Molly, the little stenographer, lately. "Just for a moment last night," she said, "she's terribly busy. There's a lot of legal copying and she has had to stay late and bring work home. She was completely discouraged last night because she had several pages to copy over on account of tiny mistakes she made because she was over-tired."
 Tell me, reader friend, does your corner of the world's work sometimes seem to you the most discouraging and disheartening of all the tasks in the world? Do you sometimes think that the obstacles you have to overcome are the most annoying that anyone ever had to face, and find yourself envying almost anyone else? Courage, comrades! We all have these moments now and then, even those whose only work is the pursuit of pleasure. Doubtless, at the very moment when I threw down my pen, some social dinner was crying her heart out because she had not been invited to some particular function.
 So courage, comrades. Remember it isn't your particular lot, it's the lot of humanity, which is born to try, to fail, to be discouraged and to try again till "the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold."

The Awakening of Peggy

LXII.
 Father Recommends Peggy to Assist a Good Woman in a Worthy Work, and We Hope Peggy Will Comply.
 ADMONISHED by papa to cast up her account with life and try to figure out her aims and her duties, Peggy did the most natural thing in the world. She went to her room and had a good cry.
 The very idea! Wasn't it perfectly mean to spoil a good summer's fun by asking a girl to think of her duty? Duty! Peggy hated the word with a scorching hatred. Could anything be more tiresome?
 Of course, Peggy expected, in common with other girls, to marry at the appropriate time, but for the present, she sincerely believed that the world owed her a carefree existence during the butterfly period. Only a sour old tramp would deny a girl the joy, pin her down like this? But she had some days at the threshold of life. Peggy decided to mention this point in her next talk with papa. She would ask him if he would cut short her girlish enjoyment, that would be a poser for papa who ought to be the last one on earth to be narrow.
 When it came to a consideration of mother, Peggy found it not so easy to advance a call to follow her father's injunction that she consider her purpose in life.
 "Well, little girl," said father that evening, seizing time by the forelock, "you are a young woman now, and you ought to have a plan. What of the future? What do you want?"
 "Matrimony," replied Peggy, demurely. She felt that a perfectly safe answer.
 "When and with whom?" parried father.
 "Why, papa, how can I tell now?" smiled Peggy.
 "There you go again," said father, answering by evasion. "You may marry some day, of course, but what of the present? Do you think you should be useful, or do you feel it isn't necessary?"
 Peggy meant to get in something clever some day, of course, but what good times, but the moment didn't seem appropriate. What could have come over kind, indulgent papa, to old tramp would deny a girl the joy, pin her down like this? But she had some days at the threshold of life. It to answer his question as to whether or not she felt she should be useful, or she felt she should be useful, or she felt she should be useful.
 "I might do settlement work," she ventured.
 "So you might," rejoined her father. "There is a certain fascination in going among the people who are so fortunate as you, and in offering to do things for them that give you a chance to show your superior advantages and attainments."
 "Now, I know a place," continued papa, after a moment's reflection, "where your efforts would be appreciated, and where they would do some good. I know a woman who would welcome the assistance of a girl like yourself, a woman rich in experience who is doing a worthy work. It would do you good to work with her and really get to know her."
 "Who is she, and where can I find her?"
 "Your mother, and she's washing dishes in the kitchen right now," said father, and Peggy went out and wiped the dishes.
 even a shabby tray.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
 A small speck of cream of tartar put in boiled nutmeg and cooked with it will prevent it turning back to saffron.
 Always wash white silk gloves in cold water and white soap and they will not become yellow.
 Common bracken fern laid down in places frequented by cockroaches will drive them away.
 Sprinkle dry flour over any japanned trays that are beginning to look shabby. Leave for an hour or so, then rub off the flour and polish with a soft duster. It will improve the shine.

plint of cream and freeze. If orange juice or orange pulp is to be added it must be done after the cream is frozen, the cream stirred a minute longer, and then the orange juice or pulp added. Blood oranges make delicious ice cream with a most unusual flavor. They also give a beautiful color.
 Peach Ice Cream—Melt half cup of sugar in hot water, and in the hot sirup dissolve two tablespoonsful of gelatin, which has been soaked in one-fourth cup of water. Add two cups of whipped cream, add almond essence, place in a mold, pack and freeze.
 Coffee Ice Cream—Scald two cups of milk with one-half cup of ground coffee. Mix one and one-fourth cups of sugar, one tablespoonful of salt and one egg, slightly beaten. Then pour or gradually the hot mixture, cook in a double boiler twenty minutes, stirring constantly at first, and afterward less frequently. Cool, add one quart of thin cream and one tablespoonful of vanilla. Strain and freeze.
 Grape Ice Cream—To one quart of grape juice, add the juice of one lemon and one quart of cream. If the juice is not sweetened, add one pound of sugar. Mix the ingredients and freeze.
 Fig Ice Cream—Boil some figs until tender, mash them very fine, and add a cupful to a quart of ice cream and a quart of cherry juice, and freeze. It will not be solid, and should be served in small glasses.
 Raisin Ice Cream—Take two cups of seeded raisins finely ground, two cups of sugar, four eggs, one pint of cream, five pints of fresh milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the eggs well, add sugar and beat again; add cream and beat again. Thin the raisins with milk and stir thoroughly in the freezer.
 Almond Ice Cream—Brown two tablespoonsful of sugar in a pan, making a caramel. This is done by placing the sugar in a skillet without water or butter, stirring it while it melts and growing it to a brown. This one cup of finely chopped almonds. Cool and add one teaspoonful of vanilla and one teaspoonful of almond extract and fold into the ice cream. It is best to add two beaten eggs to a gallon of water. This gives a delicate flavor.
 Coconut Ice Cream—Put one pint of milk in a double boiler with one-half cup of sugar. Add the grated rind of half a lemon, the pulp of three bananas and one cup of coconut. Set away to cool, and when cold add one quart of cream and freeze.

Everyday Talks To Everyday People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Every mother in the United States should be interested in the moving pictures that are nightly thrown on screens for the amusement of the "movie" going public. It might be fairer to the theaters to say that these pictures are produced for the instruction as well as amusement of the public and some of them can be classed under that head. Some of them—not all. The newspapers are called to task, without any time being lost, when they are even thought guilty of being the cause of placing before children any wrong impressions. In saying this, we know that there are some newspapers that are fit to enter one's home—but we are not going to deal with anything "yellow."

Forty-five boys, between the ages of eight and fourteen (an impressionable age), attended a moving picture show one evening not so many years ago in a city not a thousand miles removed from the city wherein your boy lives and sat through a "problem play" and a detective story and by their enthusiastic reception of the movie fairies gave proof of the fact that they, at least, were being royally entertained.
 We have so many reform movements but where is our reform movement on this great, big question? How are we going to get moving pictures put before our growing children that will be instructive as well as amusing? Are we ever going to have them—and if so—why not now?

If mention of this sort is ever casually made, at once a host of "knockers" (that is the only word that explicitly expresses it), that "knockers" are trying to run down some local institution. Of course, this town is the only town that has moving pictures, the only town where the children are allowed to see little children to attend the movies nightly—alone.
 Again: When you sit through some of these plays and look about you at the girls ranging in age from twelve to twenty, does the thought ever come to you that these young girls are getting their ideas of the big problems of life in general fairly catapulted at them from the screen of a moving picture, in a far inferior way than they received these like impressions. It was your mother told you the serious things; gave you your foundation when things seemed toppling around your young, mystified head. In the daughters of today—our mothers of tomorrow—why, they receive their impressions from a picture-play. A play written or revised by some man, of the world. There is a mighty danger in the two viewpoints. One is given in faith and love; the other is handed out for the coin of the realm.
 Moving pictures are a power for good or evil, and while you can say in rebuttal to that to the pure in mind all things are pure, you can also truthfully say that for children to be forced into the land of grown ups before their childish mind is ready for this change is inhuman. It is!

One can always remain at home if they do not approve. That, however, is not safeguarding the children who attend. In every town there are enough women who are anxious to attend to such matters, but somehow, after meeting, drawing up resolutions and adjourning, the thing is put on the table. You cannot blame the women. Getting sixteen to twenty at these plays, that are all right if one is old enough. Are we going to have moving pictures that children can attend?

Fine Feathers

Novelized from Eugene
Walter's Drama by

By
WEBSTER DENISON

Copyright, A. C. McClure & Co., 1914.

"Well, then, it's worse than misery, Bob! It's hell! This dam's gone. Went under at two o'clock this afternoon!"

He thrust the paper with its glaring headlines before their faces. With Jane swaying and clinging to her husband for support they read:

HUNDREDS DEAD!

Pecos River Dam Goes Out Sweeping
All Before It!

Six Hundred Persons Caught in the Raging Torrent Are Drowned Like
Rats in the Narrow Valley.

MOST OF THE VICTIMS
WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Inferior Construction Charged; and Rigid Inquiry by Both State and Federal Authorities to Begin at Once.

As he finished the last of the screaming headlines Reynolds stood almost rigid with terror. Neither he nor Jane spoke a word. Dick, watching his friend for sign of physical release he dreaded, noted the look of terror as Bob's eyes left the paper and glanced at him. He construed the dread alarm that glance conveyed as one of personal concern and hastened to offer such meager assurances as he could.

"There's no real report about the cause yet, Bob," he said. "They merely say the work was not up to standard and by the time they find out where the real weakness was—the cement—you and Jane will be well away. You must be," he added quickly, as Reynolds raised a hand of dissent. "You can't think of anything else for quick and sufficient protection of—"

But Reynolds cut him off with another wave of his hand—this time a gesture for silence, imperative and impetuous.

"How many are really dead?" he asked almost inaudibly and sank down on the divan with face buried in his hands.

"Probably a hundred or less, by the time the truth is sifted out," Dick answered. "You know reports of these things are always exaggerated in the newspapers. Not intentionally," he continued, in quick defense of his calling, "but the suddenness and horror of any catastrophe always impresses the man who is sending the report with the idea of a greater calamity than actually occurs. And there is always a propensity for overestimating rather than underestimating. Especially in floods. There are a hundred ways for escape that are never thought of."

Again Reynolds interrupted him.

"Men—women—and children—dead," he cried hoarsely. "Dead, and I killed them!"

He repeated the accusation over and over. There was no thought of the personal penalty he faced. Truly Dick had misunderstood the appeal of that pitiful look, one that would rend the heart of the coldest man. For Reynolds was not entirely unprepared for this terrible culmination of his sin. Twice in his dreams the terrible phantom of such a scene had come and then, as now, it had brought no thought of self-pitiful, but realization of the awful effect of his transgression.

To Jane the announcement of the disaster brought not only shock, but sickening fear, and womanlike, her first thought was self-preservation. She staggered up from the divan where she had sunk beside her husband and stood wringing her hands in a hysterical way while from lips that were dry and parched, she whispered:

"I'll pack the things, Bob. We should get away—away—now. Every moment is precious."

She looked appealingly at the reporter as if urging confirmation of her fears, and he was not slow in responding to them.

"She's right, Bob," he warned briskly. "The telephone may ring or someone may come any minute. Come, old man, brace up for your own sake and for Jane's. What's done can't be undone now and the thing for you to do is to get quickly for the protection of all. Come," he repeated and pulled gently at his friend's coat sleeve. But Reynolds sat immovable with face still pressed between his hands and through them, raven like, he moaned:

"Men—women—and children—Dead. Oh, my God!—And I killed them."

The stupor and apparent helplessness of her husband aroused Jane now to acute realization of their peril and the need of immediate action in which she must take the lead. She stole softly behind the divan and bending over, drew Bob's hands away from his face. With infinite tenderness she pressed her own hands against his temples and held them there as if she hoped the touch of them would end the wild throbbing of his brain. She coaxed and petted him as one might a suffering child.

"Bob, dear," she cried softly, "come. Do as Dick says. You know we must get away. There is no other way now. I love you, dear, and I want the chance to show it; to begin all over; to convince you that you didn't marry just a grasping, worldly woman, but what you thought you did—a woman who can love and make you happy."

A sudden clanging at the doorbell startled them and put an end to Jane's soft persuasions. It roused even Reynolds from his lethargic grief. He glanced up with the others, but his look was one of quiet resignation.

"It's too late," was all he said and started toward the door. But the reporter seized his arm and pulled him back.

"Let me answer it," he warned. "You and Jane keep your nerve and say nothing."

Dick, braced for most any emergency, from crossing wits with some colleague of former newspaper days to laying his suaveest blandishments at the feet of an omniscient detective, smiled in spite of himself as the opening door admitted Brand. Brand hurried and worried, and bent as the reporter well knew, on the same mission as himself—to get the Reynolds with all possible speed out of the reach of the law. But the millionaire, seeking only his own protection, misread the purpose of Meade's visit. He glowered at the reporter. His look was a mingling of vindictiveness, concern and infinite disgust.

"Good Lord, you here already," he cried. "You'd have to clear out while I have a word with Reynolds. There's no time for your chatter now. You know what's happened, Reynolds?"

He pushed past the reporter and stood confronting Bob.

"Yes, I know and he knows, Brand. Once again there's no need for him to leave. I've told you before that I'd trust Meade before I would you, so either he stays or you go. There's your choice."

The millionaire, hurled a venomous look at Dick, and turned again to Reynolds.

"All right," he exclaimed impatiently. "You're past arguing with Time's precious and I won't attempt it. We've got 24 hours to get ready for what's going to happen and if we act instead of talk we'll beat them to it. There's hell to pay. You can count on that. The thing crumbled like dust. They say the first reports were exaggerated, but I know the situation in that valley and the probability is it'll be worse."

"And you said it would last a hundred years," Jane interrupted, tremulously.

Brand gave her a withering glance. "I'm not here to argue what I said or what I didn't say. I'm here to get you out of the consequences of what has happened. They've never had such high water in the history of the country and the dam would have stood everything that was asked of it under ordinary circumstances. Luck broke against us, that's all. Now you two have got to get out of the country and you've got to get out quick. That's the first thing."

Something in the quiet look of the man he addressed nettled Brand and the words that followed upset him more.

"So you've come to run me away?" said Reynolds. "Criminal first and fugitive afterwards. That's the only solution you see to it, is it?"

"Of course, it's the only solution. You've got to save yourself and your wife, too. It'll be all right. Every wheel's been started to offset the engineers' reports. I'll handle them all right, but they mustn't get hold of you. Not now, anyway. You're not safe. Afterwards things will adjust themselves and you can come back. But the first big move is to get you away."

For the first time since his acquaintance with Brand, Meade felt that he could honestly second one of the millionaire's arguments. His words nearly took Brand off his feet, for he had feared more than anything else the conscientious scruples of this young genius and their probable effect on the man who stood between him and safety.

"Brand is right this time, Bob," said the reporter calmly. "I have arranged for all that," he continued, turning to the millionaire. "I've got their tickets and they can sail on the Lusitania at one o'clock in the morning."

"Well, I'm a fool, if you haven't got some sense after all," he complimented. Then he faced quickly again towards Reynolds. "I've brought you a letter of credit and some ready money. Where the letter of credit came from nobody knows and nobody will know. As soon as you get to England, if nothing stops you, go to Belgium. There's an address on this letter where I'll communicate with you at Brussels. Don't worry. You'll slip through like an eel."

He turned again to Dick.

"If you've got the transportation and sailing arranged, that's fine. I want to get out of here now and don't want anyone to know I was here to-night. Brace up, Reynolds, and you, too, Mrs. Reynolds. Keep your heads up and take it easy. That's all, I guess."

He put out his hand with the letter but Reynolds raised his in dissent.

"Wait a minute," he said quietly. "That isn't all. I thank you, Brand, for your solicitous care for me."

"But I have been doing some thinking of my own in the last half hour and my plans don't seem to go on at all where yours leave off. It might interest you to know, before you go, that I am going to stay right here and tell the truth from first to last—from the time you came to Staten Island, until Mrs. Reynolds received a letter from you the other day showing that you had voluntarily squared a criminal transaction for me at the back."

As he finished Bob's hat came down on the little center table and almost shattered it. There was the vigor and determination that Brand had had to respect once before when he had loosed his wiles on a more gullible recipient. But now, in this crisis, he had not even considered the chance of opposition to his will. First astonished, then thoughtful, his florid features now revealed their old cunning.

"You play the game big, Reynolds," he said at last. "Either this is a holdup right, or you have gone clear crazy."

Dinner Stories

The telephone operator was spending the summer holiday by the sound of the sea. On the first morning, however, she had occasion to rate the maid of the lodgings for real or imagined negligence.

"Why didn't you call me as I told you this morning?" she demanded.

"I did, miss," replied the maid, with an injured air. "I called out 'Seven-thirty, and all you ses was, 'Number engaged.'"

Brown had been saying that the pickpocket scare was nothing more than a lot of panicky exaggeration, and that a man, if only he were sensible and moderately careful, had really very little to fear from the light-fingered fraternity while walking through the streets.

"I'm not so sure," said Jones. "Why, only yesterday one of those beggars tried to pick my pocket, but happily my wife prevented him."

"Oh," said Brown, becoming interested, "that was jolly smart of her."

What did she do—grab him, or merely scream?"

"Neither," replied Jones. "As a matter of fact, she wasn't with me at the time."

"Wasn't with you? What do you mean?"

"My dear chap," sighed Jones, "you wait till you get married; then you may learn what an advantage it is to have a wife who goes through your pockets overnight."

ADVOCATE DRAINAGE OF SWAMP MARSHES

State Experts Issue Bulletin on Draining of Marsh Lands in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 2.—A great addition to the farming area of Wisconsin would be made if the marsh lands were properly drained and managed, according to a bulletin issued today by the state agricultural experiment station. According to the bulletin the marsh lands of this state comprise 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 acres, some of which lies in large marshes of from 25,000 to 50,000 acres but which for a large part, is in small areas. The bulletin digests says:

The chemical composition and the possibility of thorough drainage are the chief factors which determine the value of marsh lands for cultivation. The drainage of marshes is the first step toward improvement. On large marshes the organization of drainage districts and the cooperation of a number of adjoining land owners is necessary, but thousands of farms include some marsh land which can be readily drained by the owners without legal difficulties.

Proper tillage of marsh lands is of the utmost importance. Heavy rolls, by packing the loose peat soil, produces a firmer seed bed which is better adapted to cultivated crops, especially small grains.

Fertilization of marsh soils is important on account of the unbalanced condition of the elements which they contain. Marsh soils are excessively rich in nitrogen, but are frequently deficient in phosphorus and potassium. While barnyard manure will supply the last two elements, these can be supplied in commercial fertilizers, allowing the use of all elements are needed. Under such special conditions it is profitable to use commercial fertilizers supplementing the manure of the farm.

Acidity develops in marsh soils quite commonly where lime carbonate is not brought in from surrounding higher land. This acidity, however, does not interfere with the growth of crops provided the soil is properly fertilized. Very commonly acid soils require phosphate as well as potash fertilizers. The acidity of marsh soils in the southeastern part of the state is very generally neutralized by the lime carbonate in the water sweeping in from the surrounding higher lands of this limestone section.

NEGLECTS LICENSE; GIVEN HEAVY FINE

Foreigner Does Not Think "It Necessary to Have License to Peddle So Is Given Reminder."

J. J. Kaleen, an Armenian peddler, was arrested yesterday for peddling without a state or even a city license and was fined twenty-five dollars and costs by Municipal Judge Maxfield. Kaleen was arrested by Policeman Harry Smith, after he had evaded the authorities for several days, and on other occasions that Mr. Kaleen has visited the city with business intentions.

Peddler Kaleen was very indignant at being pinched by Chief of Police Champion promptly escorted him to the city clerk's office to see if a permit to peddle. There was no trace of his name on the books, and Mr. Kaleen was promptly taken across the hall to the court room. A state warrant was made out charging Kaleen with selling merchandise without a state peddling license, and he was arraigned before Judge Maxfield in the municipal court.

Kaleen attempted to explain the "situation" to Judge Maxfield, and he declared he was working in Janesville for the first time, having just completed a tour of the summer resorts, where business was thriving. At this point of the plea Chief Champion and City Clerk Hammel ventured to dispute the foreigner's word. In Janesville and on each occasion it was a case of a needle in the straw stack to find the peddler. Where the police were—the "wasn't" in the case, evidence was introduced in the case, the attitude of the peddler changed, but still insisted he did not know he had to have a license. Judge Maxfield cut short his plea by telling him to leave for Chicago on the next train and to packed what Kaleen would make to the charge.

"Ever Honor, how much will it cost to plead guilty?" inquired the defendant. The court was unable to inform Kaleen just what the state penalty would be, but after conferring with several countrymen, who were summoned by telephone, Kaleen decided to plead guilty and take his medicine. "Twenty-five dollars and costs," was the fine imposed by Judge Maxfield.

"What's the costs for?" And how much?" anxiously inquired the peddler, showing all the traits of the merchant entreaties the costs were tacked on to the fine and Kaleen finally paid the total amounting to $27.40.

Chief Champion warned Kaleen that if he did not get out of town he would be prosecuted for violation of the city ordinance, not having a city permit to sell merchandise.

If Muggsy McGraw had Shafer on third at the present time, he would worry a little less about the Boston Braves. At this time last year Shafer was sitting in the dugout, and McGraw was a star because he used his own head while playing and frequently had an idea of his own as to how a thing should be done. That is why he is no longer with the Giants. He quit because he didn't care to be told how to manage every play. He was well enough fixed financially to retire. It may have been noticed that with the exception of Natty there isn't a player on the Giants roster who employs headwork. They are all exceptionally clever mechanical players, and McGraw directs their work for them. He prefers to do all the thinking that is to be done. Shafer didn't care to abide this and so he left. Perhaps Muggsy feels just now that if he could have Shafer back he would let him do his own thinking.

Many declare that with only three winning pitchers—Tyler, Rudolph and James—Stallings, the Boston chief, will have his troubles yet. Which seems to show pretty well how we have come to regard pitchers. Many seem to think that if a pitcher wins one game he should have several weeks rest that he may rally his strength and fully recover. This is largely because pitchers have come to have an awful pipe and by most clubs they are pampered entirely too much. Any pitcher with a reasonable measure of health who can't contribute to pitch every three days without taking to his bed should be sent back to whence he came. Boston, with Tyler, Rudolph and James willing to step in whenever asked, should have little trouble. The threat of a "Heard" seems to have no trouble, and if it comes to a world's series, it's a safe bet that the three will be able to negotiate it without breaking down under the strain.

In a recent game against the Giants, Slim Saltee, pitching for the Cards, allowed them but one clean hit. The other three had been scratched on account of very cheap errors due to slow fielding and so on. The one clean hit, though, was a three-bagger in the ninth inning with the bases full, and the Giants declared that the one game was quite enough. It won the game.

Von Kolnitz, a recruit with the Cincinnati Reds, has made a real hit with Charley Herzog, and it isn't unlikely that he will get Niehoff's job at third. Herzog seems determined to come what may, to maintain the German identity of his infield. And Von Kolnitz seems even a little more Germanish than Niehoff.

It may be remembered by some that when the Braves, after a long slump, first began to climb, the Giants expressed themselves as pleased at the sight of it and declared that they hoped Stallings' bunch would continue to enjoy a prosperous season. There has been a feeling among the Giants of late, however, that they were a little lavish in their encouragement.

WESTERN POLO TOURNAMENT ON AT COLORADO SPRINGS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Colorado Springs, Sept. 2.—Colorado Springs Society today flocked to Broadmead polo field to witness the opening game of the annual polo tournament staged by the Cheyenne Mountain Country Club. Teams representing Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, St. Louis, Colorado, Calif., Glenwood Springs, Colo., Sheridan, Wyo., and the two Colorado Springs country clubs are here to participate. Some of the best crack players of the country will play during the week. The East is more or less unsettled in its polo opinions since the recent disastrous defeat of the Meadow Brook four by the British challengers and it is hoped that some Western players of high calibre will be developed who may play with the American challenge team which will go to England next year.

GERMANS MAKE USE OF ZEPPELIN SHIPS FOR BOMB-THROWING

Utilize Fleet of Dirigibles to Spread Destruction and Death in Awful Manner.

Just what part of the final outcome of the European war will aerial forces play? That is a question that has been asked many times, not only in this country, but in Europe itself.

There is no doubt that the air fleets have made a powerful appeal to the imagination. And this appeal has been greater in the case of the big German dirigibles than of the smaller Zeppelins. An impressive thing because of its size. The great bulks floating and moving swiftly in the upper air have never failed to impress the man who has seen them and he hasn't forgotten that impression in his description.

With the mental pictures of aerial liners which have been drawn for us, it hasn't been hard to conjure up ideas of terrible speed and power. Such monsters, lifting and sustaining themselves in the central blue, it seems, must necessarily prove tremendous engines of destruction when unleashed. The Germans haven't overlooked the appeal her giant air craft make to the imagination. The Zeppelin Legend, if so it might be called, has been effectively pushed by all Germany's well-bathed instruments of publicity.

The use of the dirigible at Antwerp, when bombs were dropped on the sleeping city, is the only instance in which the huge, floating warcraft invented by Count Zeppelin, proved successful. Dispatches from the field of war have already shown that six of the German aerial feet have been easily destroyed by the Belgians and French.

Airship at Disadvantage. As a matter of fact, in a gun duel between the airship and a fort or a ship beneath it the airship is always bound to be at a disadvantage, for the simple reason that the air will not support sufficient weight of armor or of guns to offset those that can be mounted on the earth or ocean. Armor for armor and gun for gun, the people who have a conscience by the chance to keep themselves aloft are bound to be outclassed.

In the question of accuracy volumes have been written to prove that the Zeppelin, circling above a fort or ship at high speed, could pour in a rain of shells with terrible precision, while the gunners below would be unable to hit her. Any man who has shot ducks on the wing should have better luck. It is easy for the Zeppelin, by remaining far enough aloft, or by moving at high speed and rapidly changing course to make it almost impossible for any one below to hit her. But those very tactics she makes it impossible for her own gunners to hit anything below. She can come down low, and by moving slowly on a steady course, enable her own gunners to take good aim at a fort below—but by that very course she is offering her fragile 600 feet of length as an easy target for a much more heavily armed enemy.

Nor need anyone argue that because the gunners below must aim at a background of sky their accuracy will suffer. Smoke-tracers by day and fire-tracers by night, enable spotter to follow the flight of shell, have been in use these fifteen years.

As to Bomb-Dropping. To drop a bomb of sufficient size and weight to accomplish serious damage to the armored deck of a warship or the casemates of a fort, from a Zeppelin, would be to incur grave danger of wrecking the Zeppelin by the tremendous rebound.

Bomb-dropping from the air, therefore, is reduced to the proportions of throwing hand grenades. And it has been proved over and over again that such weapons, dropped from above on troops in the open, are apt to bury themselves in the ground, all but innocuous, unless thrown with an accuracy only attainable by coming so close as to afford an easy mark for rifle fire.

Nobody knows better than the Germans themselves the truth of these things. They may encourage the Zeppelin legend for its effect on the nerves of their enemies, but it is safe to say that never once has the general staff thought seriously of using its precious, fabulously expensive, fragile airships in a real attack on an enemy on the ground.

It cannot be too thoroughly impressed on one, how fragile these big ships have to be, and how costly. Only the best materials and the utmost care and skill in construction can be used in them. They must be charged with pure hydrogen gas, which is expensive and difficult to procure. They must be housed in enormous sheds fitted with all imaginable repair and safeguarding devices. And one in the air, or straining burst—more, one well-aimed sky-rocket, is enough to reduce them to total ruin, with a horrible death for every man on board.

What, then, are they good for? "The dropping of just one thing," said Captain Tom Baldwin, who has been connected with the flying business for forty years, and is an authority on dirigibles, "and that is for scouting and at night shall be very much surprised if we hear of any dirigible making any real offensive moves in daylight or doing more than a bit of annoying, long range fire, to pester the other fellow, at any time."

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE APOLLO.

"SHOULD A WOMAN TELL?" This picture which will be shown tonight in five reels is undoubtedly the most amazingly sensational photo-drama of domestic problems ever produced. The answer can not be arrived at until after one has seen the pictures and then not by some.

"THE LITTLE REBEL." Here is a play that carried the theatres by storm and has been produced in union picture form by the Photo-play Productions company. It is a thrilling and deeply pathetic episode of the Civil war, founded on a true incident, intensified by a series of spectacular and realistic battle scenes.

Little Mimi Yvonne takes the role of Virgie about whom the story hangs. Believing she will delight all children the management has announced a Little Virgie Matinee for the children, at which time $5 in gold will be given away. The Little Rebel will be presented at the Apollo next Wednesday, Sept. 9th.

TOMORROW IS CIRCUS DAY SO BE SURE AND GET READY

Cheer up, kids, tomorrow is circus day. The red letter day of all days in the calendar of youth, which the small boys have been awaiting impatiently for several weeks is almost here at last. Those ever welcome red wagons, the ponderous elephants, the camels and lions and tigers and all the other wonders of Spangtown will arrive in Janesville in the early hours of tomorrow morning, coming on four long red and yellow trains from De Kalb, where the show is exhibiting today.

The yards of the Northwestern railroad tomorrow morning will be the center of attraction for young and old alike. The arrival and unloading of a circus is ever an event of interest to the youngster, and often his dad as well, but when the circus which arrives bears the magic name of Ringling Brothers, and when it requires eighty-nine railroad cars to transport the big outfit, the event is indeed one to be looked forward to with impatience.

To those who are either too sleepy or too busy to arise in the small hours of the morning and watch the big show come into the city and unload, the first event of the day upon which they will center their attention will be the street parade. The "gorgeous cavalcade," it is promised, will be more glittering and gorgeous than ever before and will doubtless attract thousands of spectators to the downtown streets during the morning hours.

The parade will start from the showgrounds promptly at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. It will follow the usual line of march through the principal streets of the city and will display more gold and glitter than has been seen on the local thoroughfares in many a day. It will include all the performers and animals and a long line of handsomely decorated tableaux cars filled with pretty dancing girls in gay costumes. The magnificent cages will be open so that their inhabitants will be in full view of the spectators, and a big animal feature of the parade will be a team of sixteen camels, broken to bit and bridle, and drawing a huge allegorical chariot. Another imposing feature will be the line of forty-one elephants marching two abreast and carrying their trainers on their heads.

Six bands will furnish music for the procession, and the parade will be a "callopies-count 'em, two." As usual, the clowns will be on hand to furnish fun for the youngsters and the parade, when stretched out will cover a distance of approximately three miles.

The circus program which will be presented tomorrow afternoon and evening will include a host of new arctic acts which have never before appeared in this country. In the ring entertainment there are 400 performers, and nearly all of these are foreigners who are making their first appearance in America this season under the Ringling banner. They have been gathered from every corner of the world by the European agents of the circus and many of them have scored tremendous successes in the circuses and music halls of the continent.

One of the sensational novelties of the season is the Balkan troupe of Oriental riders, who, until a few weeks ago were favorite entertainers in the burrows of the far east. They were discovered by an agent of the Ringling Brothers, who was buying horses in the Balkan mountains. These daring bareback riders present an act which is entirely different from anything in the equestrian line ever attempted in the circus ring, and their riding feats have been pronounced by old time circus riders as the most difficult and hazardous ever witnessed.

The circus program opens with the massive spectacle of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, which the Ringling Brothers are featuring this season. This production requires a cast of 1,250 characters and is presented on a stage which occupies nearly one entire side of the main circus tent. The costumes and scenery were prepared at a cost of $1,000,000 and are the most elaborate and gorgeous effects ever carried by a tented amusement enterprise. A feature of the spectacle is a ballet of 300 girls under the personal direction of Gustav Bittke, balletmaster of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

In the three rings, two stages and in the aerial rigging following the spectacle, there will be one long array of thrills and sensations. There will be pretty girl riders galore, led by such queens of circuses as Josephine Clark, the most beautiful bareback rider in the world. The aerial acts will include such famous artists as the Mirano and Andress brothers, wonderful perch performers; the Clarksons, who turn triple somersaults in mid-air; and fully three score of other thrilling arctic novelties. Among the riding acts there are many new performers, including Charles Augustus Clark, England's foremost equestrian, and the famous four Lloyds, daring Indian riders.

An amusing feature of the program will be a pair of boxing kangaroos. These interesting animals are giants of their species and have been imported from Australia during the past winter especially for the Ringling Brothers Circus. Of course a circus wouldn't be a circus without clowns and there will be fully fifty of them on hand tomorrow to furnish joy for the youngsters and grownups. George Hartzell and Jules Turnour, the Beau Brummel comedians of the sawdust arena, will be among those present, as will also Jim Spriggs, the world famous clown policeman, the two Del-torellas, former jesters to the Shah of Persia, the Mardos, Eddie Nemo and a host of other well known harlequins.

The afternoon performance will begin promptly at two o'clock and the evening performance at eight o'clock, but the doors will be thrown open a full hour earlier, to allow ample time for visitors to inspect the enormous menagerie, containing more than a thousand wild beasts in addition to the largest herd of elephants in captivity. There will be exactly 41 of these ponderous beasts on hand to assist the children in disposing of their pennies. There will also be a herd of 32 camels, 10 zebras and 5 giraffes, including a pair of "rubberneck twins," Jack and Jill. A downtown sale will be opened at the People's Drug company's store tomorrow morning, beginning at nine o'clock. Tickets may be purchased at the same price charged at the circus grounds.

F. J. BAILEY & SON ON THE BRIDGE

National Geographic Society War Primer,

Valenciennes—A French frontier town with a population of about 28,000, 39 miles southeast of Lille, at the confluence of the Rhonelle and the Scheldt. It is in the heart of a great industrial region near the Anzin coal region. It is a French edition of the city of Liege, except that it is unfortified, the old fortifications having been transformed into pleasure grounds and drives in 1892. It has a long military history, which it was taken by Louis XIV after an eight-day siege. In 1793 it surrendered after a bombardment of 43 days, and in 1815 it defended itself successfully.

Soignies—A flourishing town of the province of Hainaut, Belgium, owing its prosperity to the important blue granite quarries in the neighborhood. The forest of Soignies extended in the middle ages over the southern part of Brabant up to the walls of Brussels, and is immortalized in Byron's Childe Harold. The last blow towards its gradual destruction was struck when Napoleon ordered 22,000 oaks to be cut down in it to build the celebrated Boulogne flotilla for the invasion of England. A considerable portion of the forest in the neighborhood of Waterloo was assigned in 1815 to the Duke of Wellington, and to the holder of the title as long as it endured.

Mauveuge—A town in northern France, in the department of Nord, about two miles from the Belgian frontier. As a fortress Mauveuge has an old enceinte of bastion trace which serves as the center of an important entrenched camp of 18 miles perimeter, constructed for the most part after the war of 1870, but since modernized and augmented. It is an important manufacturing center, with a population of approximately 15,000. The city was razed a number of times and was unsuccessfully besieged in 1815, but was compelled to capitulate after a vigorous resistance, in the Hundred Days.

Bouillon—A small town in southern Belgium, 10 miles northeast of the French town of Sedan. It is situated in the beautiful valley of the Semois, and is overlooked by the famous castle of Godfrey of Bouillon. The fifth Godfrey of Bouillon was the great crusader and the captor of Jerusalem. He sold his castle to finance the crusade. Napoleon III, after the capture at Sedan, spent the night here as a prisoner.

Sedan—A town of nearly 20,000 population, in northern France, where the French and Prussians met in 1870, and where the French were forced into an unconditional surrender, including their king, an army of 82,000, 655 guns, and an immense amount of stores. The Germans lost 9,000 and the French 17,000. Marshal MacMahon gathered his retreating army there on August 31, but made no attempt to communicate with VI-th Corps at Metz, nor to break through the gap between the German third and Meuse armies. The Germans surrounded the city. MacMahon was wounded, and command fell upon General Ducrot. He decided to move the whole army to the west in the direction of Metz. At this junction, after the orders went out, General Wimpfen, who had arrived from Alsace the preceding night, took command, and ordered the army to move in the opposite direction. The confusion that resulted ended with the hoisting of the white flag in the village church steeple, and the surrender of the French.
